A new humorist is a fearful personage, especially when he proposes to be funny for one long mortal hour on a stretch. Imagination recoils at the bare idea. Yet they do say that "Joeh Billings" (Henry W. Shaw of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.), the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely and the propose of the least and a permanent or fally worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely at the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely are the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely are the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely are the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely are the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely are the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely are the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely are the latest risen star in the comic firmament, has a vein of humor not fully worked out, and that his "fecture" may be heard through without absolutely are the
